What is the DSPS/EOPS Life Coaching Program at Grossmont College?

The International Coaching Federation defines life coaching as: "Working with clients in a thought-provoking and creative process to help them maximize their personal and professional potential." Many professionals recognize the benefits of life coaching, a process that helps them balance their careers and personal lives. As a well-known strategy for success among CEOs, business executives, and education administrators, life coaching has become popular in other professional groups such as the legal and public administration communities. Consequently, many graduate programs now include life coach training in their curriculum.

At Grossmont College we believe that if life coaching is good enough for professionals, it should be available to select students on their way to join these ranks. Grossmont College offers personal life coaching to DSPS or EOPS students who face academic and life challenges. Most are first-year students or have been referred by a counselor.

The DSPS/EOPS Life Coaching Program

Life coaching at Grossmont College is a one semester program. Research indicates that students who succeed one semester are more likely to successfully reach their academic goal. The first contact is over the phone so that you and your coach can get to know each other. This gives you a chance to ask questions and schedule an initial appointment.

The first session is longer than subsequent meetings and can last as long as one-and-a-half hours. The two of you talk about what is working for you, what challenges you face and what are some specific areas you would like to focus on. At the end of the session you and your coach have an idea what you will be working on, when and where your future meetings will take place and the best methods for weekly check-ins. You will both complete and sign a contract that specifies your individual goals and related actions for the semester. These may include general goals such as: goal setting, scheduling, organizing, focusing, managing crisis, prioritizing, persisting and confidence building. The contract may also include more specific objectives such as eating more nutritionally balanced foods, taking daily vitamins, exercising regularly, eliminating or reducing caffeine/alcohol/TV/video games, sitting in the front rows of classes, creating and adhering to a budget, organizing and finding child care, and making regular use of campus and community resources. The contract is fluid and goals often change throughout the semester.

The initial session is followed by weekly sessions. Students and coaches meet for no less than 30 minutes and up to 45 minutes per week. By the end of the coaching semester most students have internalized what they have learned and are ready to graduate from the coaching program.
